The first release version was AutoCAD Release 1.0, version A1 (1986), for DOS. It took three years to create, and was published in 1989. Originally, it only had a single field to enter commands, but later versions added the capabilities of the GraphEdit windows (graphical interface to AutoCAD's drawing commands). In 1986, three companies were awarded a contract to develop AutoCAD. These included: Crescent Microsystems Inc. in Tucson, Arizona, U.S. Lucasfilm Ltd., Ltd. in London, England, U.K. Handwritten Solutions, Inc. in Thousand Oaks, California, U.S. The software was originally released as AutoCAD Release 1.0 for DOS in 1986, and was copyrighted by Handwritten Solutions Inc. A few days later, Lucasfilm Ltd. was awarded the licensing contract, which has been extended several times. In 1991, Lucasfilm Ltd. purchased Handwritten Solutions Inc. and decided to release AutoCAD as a freeware product, under a GNU license. The DOS version was renamed to AutoCAD Release 2.0.
