The inbred strain difference in ethanol preference of mice is consistent across multiple operant chambers and is abolished by genetic manipulations. A strain difference in ethanol preference was identified in an initial study, and several subsequent studies have demonstrated that this strain difference is genetically controlled. The purpose of the present study was to determine whether the strain difference in ethanol preference is consistent across multiple operant chambers and to investigate the mechanisms underlying this strain difference. A sample of 24 inbred strains of mice were tested in operant chambers comprising two different procedures (tail-pinch and alcohol swabbing). The alcohol preference of the strain difference remained consistent across two different operant chambers. Moreover, the strain difference remained when mice were subjected to increasing concentrations of ethanol. However, a strain difference in the response of mice to ethanol was observed. Mice from the C57BL/6J strain drink less ethanol than mice from the DBA/2J strain. This strain difference was abolished when mice were treated with a dopamine agonist to enhance alcohol seeking. These data indicate that the strain difference in ethanol preference is consistent across multiple operant chambers. This strain difference is not due to either an increased alcohol consumption level or a decreased sensitivity to the reinforcing properties of ethanol. The C57BL/6J strain drinks less ethanol than DBA/2J mice due to a decreased level of alcohol seeking for DBA/2J mice.) ok 15 [main] kafka-topics #15: src/prod/part-00000-8fb1289a-f6e7-4c45-8b14-f3f273d1c027.ser When I copy the files in the root directory I receive the following errors ERROR kafka.admin.AdminUtils$CommandHandler$3$1: execute failed: java.lang.NoSuchMethodError: javax/security/auth/login/AppConfigurationEntry.setAuthType(Ljava/lang/String;)Ljava/lang/String; (class: org.apache.kafka.common.security.scram.ScramLoginModule, method: set
