There's not much to fill a big star's movie with, but after next year, I think some of them will be doing the comedies they always wanted to do." - Ron Perlman On how he thinks it will impact big stars and how difficult they'll have to work if they want to have their own movies next year. (h/t to Andrew for sharing this with us) Low birth weight (LBW) infants have several major sequelae: neurodevelopmental impairment, persistent pulmonary hypertension, and, in some cases, bronchopulmonary dysplasia. Neurodevelopmental impairment is very likely due to alterations in gene expression that occur from 0-24 h after birth and are associated with hypoxia/ischemia. Physiologically based models of human neurodevelopmental impairment cannot be realized in vivo and all aspects of human LBW are not modeled in rodents. Despite known differences between the human and mouse neurodevelopmental pathways, lower-order rodents can be utilized to
