The Mortuary Assistant is a supernatural horror game created by Team Nanopark and due out for the PS Vita, PS3 and PS4 on April 20th 2016. Read on for an overview of the game, some screenshots and a trailer. Summary: The world is a dark and gloomy place; invisible, silent but ever watchful. Each day our hero does his job, the only sound being his heavy footsteps and the faint chirp of his crowbar. Occasionally, the steel door to his workplace creaks open, letting in light and causing his perfectly crafted movements to struggle. The man known only as "The Mortuary Assistant" hears this creaking, which means there is someone there. He takes a moment to find something to hide behind - reaching for his favorite crowbar, the man creeps towards the doorway, the crowbar grasped tight in his hand. The man and the door lock into a fight of shadows and steel. A solid blow to the door is met with its own solid blow to the man's hand, but he gets the better of it and manages to wrench the door open. Too soon, though, the opposing door closes, pushing the man in and locking him in. The man, trapped in a pitch black room, can only hear the faint rustle of his surroundings. As the man attempts to break out of the room, something else happens. The lights in the room flicker, and that's when he can see the silhouette of a person in the shadows. A woman's shadow, hidden in the room with him, revealing herself just a short time before he does. She extends a hand to help him, and suddenly their shadows entwine. They move towards each other, getting closer and closer. The man tries to bring his crowbar down upon the silhouette, but it is just a helpless flutter against steel. The man's shadow, trapped in the room with him, having no escape, looks to his assailant. It soon finds a hand and begins to stroke it. It breathes a breath of air, and as it exhales, a pair of eyes emerge from the shadow. They don't belong to the woman, who is still hidden in the room, but to another woman and a girl. The man, seeing them, looks to them for help, and their shadows are sucked in. Together, they leave the room through the door the man had no choice but to break down. Unbeknown to them, this is
