About the Game is a third-person action / puzzle-platformer game where you take control of two parallel lifelines in order to solve seemingly unrelated puzzles and overcome the challenges that await you. You are the son of the late Maton, a powerful and dangerous man from the dark streets of Kurentovanci. You have inherited a legacy of evil and blood, and the curse of the dead father is on your hand. You know that you're the last hope for all of your poor family. Your mission begins in Southwestern France. You need to reach the ruins of an abandoned fortress somewhere in the region and prove yourself, in order to face the evil that awaits. Soon, you will become a prisoner in a mysterious mansion, whose sinister owner would gladly use you as a sacrifice in order to extend his own life for years to come. No one knows what his plans are, or who he is, but his orders are clear: be quick with the knife. You will have to rely on yourself to overcome all obstacles and reach your goal, but beware of the walking dead. You have to bring yourself up, find your way in a maze of sand and shadows, find the memory of your sad childhood or discover the tools and weapons of a long forgotten civilization. Everything depends on you and your quick and accurate reactions. Think of the French ghost story? And think of the silent, hauntingly beautiful original soundtrack? By the hand of acclaimed filmmaker and composer Ennio Morricone.? This add-on showcases the legendary General Electric U-Boat engine, with the Seaboard Coast Line and Seaboard System liveries. The GE 36B is a 4-axle diesel switcher manufactured by General Electric (GE) in Fort Worth, Texas, for the Seaboard Coast Line. A total of 125 were manufactured (the SCL railroads were Seaboard Coast Lines predecessor companies). It was a V-P-V design with two General Electric engines and they were the same as those used in their successful U-Boat diesel switchers. The locomotive's prime movers were 6-786ci GM diesel engines. Pressed to deliver a modernized version of its earlier U-Boat switcher, SCL ordered 150 of the GE-31Bs by the beginning of 1964. This was an improved version of the U36B.

Production of the U36B was halted in 1965, and the GE-31B replaced it for a short time. In 1968, SCL added 16 more GE-31B's to the 2,000-unit backlog of switcher orders. They were delivered in 1969 through 1974. They were built for mainline freight work. Power was increased to an estimated 3,600 horsepower thanks to a diesel oil mixer and more axles. They replaced the smaller 2-axle U36D model switchers in mainline freight service. They were renamed to U36Bs in 1971. Starting in the early 1970s, the model GE-31B and U36B became the backbone of SCL's workhorses. They serviced mainline freight freight service until the early 1990s when they were replaced by the SCL's most powerful mainline switcher, the U36C.
