We also made a trip to the store to pick up some "fence controllers" that plugs into the electric fence and sends a red signal when the fence is triggered. Luckily we had some help because my mom didn't have a clue what any of the stuff was, but it worked out ok. The best part of the whole trip was that we were able to stretch the fence out in different directions and the chickens go absolutely CRAZY over it. We've had an easy peasy 4 week process getting from the "chicken pasture" to the tarmac to the end of the driveway! This turned out to be a great learning experience, I'm sure I'll think of other things to try next year and this is definitely something I'd recommend to any other farmers out there.Two Week Follow-Up In less than two weeks after their son Noah died, the Weber family says his life should still be celebrated. "He's never going to grow old enough to feel pain or sadness or any of that," said Kelly Weber, Noah's mother. "We don't want anyone else to feel that way." Ivan Weber, the youngest of the couple's three sons, was only 9 years old when he was killed in a van crash in January. At the time, the family was still in shock over his loss, and says they're not ready for it to end. "I want to remember his life and what he did in it, and I don't want to move on," Kelly Weber said. "I want to hang on to that." Weber's parents asked for their last wish be to celebrate their son's life in his memory. So, to do that, they're going to throw a party for him on July 19. A common term used in Cox regression is to say that we want to force the time transformation and use the risk score(state) of the future values as time-dependent covariate. For example, say that we want to study an event A which happens in the future and our study is made of N individuals. We can keep track of the event A of each individual, then build a coxph function with risk score of event A as a time dependent covariate. Is there a way to make the risk score of state equal to risk score of state$? I am trying to use cox function in R, but I cannot seem to get the risk score of the future event to work, unless I include the event indicator as a time-dependent covariate like the following: library(survival) library(survivalROC) # make up the simulated data event = runif(100) set.seed(0) n = 100 t0 = 1000 deaths = (runif(100,0,1)>0) cohort = data.frame(sex=rep(c(1,2),each=50),age=rep(1:50,each=10),event=rep(0,50),deaths=runif(100,0,1)) # variables for modeling age = factor(cohort$age) event = factor(cohort$event) sex = factor(cohort$sex) str(cohort) # get the distribution of the time to event curve survfit1 = survfit(surv.expo(surv.inf,sex,age,event)~1) # show that the time is right skewed plot(survfit1, type="l", lty=2) # show that there are 15 deaths in the future plot(survfit1, type="l") # fit a cox model with the time to event curve used as time-dependent covariate cr1 = coxph(surv.expo(surv.inf,sex,age,event)~
