This software developed for Windows .Rapidly rising urban populations mean that the type of food that most people in the world eat is changing, and much of it is not so pleasant to our taste buds. Most Westerners are now exposed to a lot of sugar and artificial ingredients that are not healthy. But food can taste good, and fortunately there are people out there who find ways to make it taste good. While some ideas are simply gimmicks or publicity stunts, others are real, and even traditional techniques have been applied for modern consumption. The following list is just a few of the many unusual methods that have been used to create tasty food.

Clinical outcome of mammography-guided vacuum-assisted breast biopsy: risk factors for revision surgery. The vacuum-assisted biopsy (VAB) is a widely used technique for stereotactically guided sampling of solid breast masses, in particular of mammographically detected microcalcifications. This study aimed to investigate clinical outcome and risk factors for margin involvement after VAB. Patients with abnormal finding on stereotactic mammographic examinations who had undergone VAB between 2004 and 2012 were identified from the database of the participating centers. All imaging results, including the pathological diagnosis were studied retrospectively. Patients with surgical follow-up were included in the analysis. Revision surgery was defined as re-excision of the breast with either shave biopsy or mastectomy. A total of 1283 patients were included in this study. The median follow-up was 36 months. In 565 cases (44.4%), VAB was performed as first-line diagnostic test. In the remaining 718 cases (55.6%), the stereotactic breast biopsy was performed in a suspicious mass after two negative cancer screenings. Surgical margin involvement was found in 16 patients (1.3%). Ten of these patients had undergone a first-line VAB and 6 second-line VAB. In the first-line VAB patients, preoperative MRI was performed in all patients and 14 received systemic/adjuvant treatment. Only one patient (11%) underwent revision surgery. All patients with revision surgery had received radiation therapy. The risk factors for revision surgery were smaller tumor size ($P=0.002$)
