Note A layer is anything that you place on top of the other layers. For example, you can add text, lines, and images as layers to Photoshop. The layers are stacked on top of each other to create the final image. Figure 10-1 shows some examples of different layers. Figure 10-1, Figure 10-2, and Figure 10-3 show the same image, but with different layers added. Each one is different in the way that it affects the image. Layers have color, transparency, and other characteristics that can be changed. Figure 10-1. Different layers can be added to an image. Here, the layer is named "Layer 1," and it is the first layer that is added to the image. It's composed of the Union Jack flag that is the template that is used in the image. Note the red "fire" line that runs through the center of the flag. Figure 10-2. A layer that is composed of a single shape that has been selected. Note that the image is transparent around the top of the box. Figure 10-3. A layer that's composed of two shapes that have been selected. The layer also serves as a template for a collection of shapes that follow it when other images are

I've also used SDDS to check a few areas for western submarine fossils. Ocala Limestone has several important primary indicator structures for the Cutler Vertebrate Faunal Zone (CVFZ). Most of these geologic indicators are limited to outcrop, so the rocks are available to the public and can be quarried. They are frequently minor structures, very hard to recognize in the field, and would be of little or no interest to the general public. Submarine canyons provide another fantastic landscape for producing "big picture" views of the Quaternary. They are also a great source for tracking the landscape history of a region, as well as providing a more immediate view of geologic hazards such as fault zones. Submarine canyons are rare features found within limestone, sandstone, carbonate, and shale. They tend to form under certain conditions, including the presence of relatively pure water moving through the bedrock. Lake or river floodplain environments provide the most commonly seen conditions that lead to the formation of submarine canyons. For example, the Palisades and Baldwin Hills Terraces regions have seen periods of floodplain development in the past, though they are no longer active in that way. Both of these locations are the source for the national monument and park attractions, respectively. Baldwin Hills, San Diego County, California. Submarine canyons have a special layer of sediment between the overlying sediment and the submarine canyon walls. These layers are distinctly lighter in color than the rock that forms the walls and floors of the canyons. The lighter material can often be seen poking out of the overlying layers. A deep ocean trench has also been important to studying these structures. The trench is very deep, and can be hundreds of meters deep and extend for hundreds of kilometers. Being so deep provides a unique opportunity to study details of the basin. The trenches are usually covered by water, and it is hard to get to the bottom to study the various rock units there, but several large deep ocean trenches provide many opportunities to study the deep crust and subsurface history of the ocean basin. The Azores-Bermuda Ridge

Trench. The Azores-Bermuda Ridge Trench is the deepest of the three trenches in the Atlantic Ocean and provides excellent material for offshore studies. Submarine canyons are relatively common in many of the basins that include these trenches, and are often the most important features where

Q: Matching string pattern in PHP I have a file containing a bunch of strings, separated by newlines. I'd like to know what lines in the file match a regular expression pattern in the format ..., where is some placeholder for an actual regular expression that the user can enter in. I've tried the following: if (preg_match("/ .../", file_get_contents($pattern_file))) { echo

"True "; } else { echo "False "; } But I'm getting a Notice: Undefined offset: 1, which would indicate that the expression is not being evaluated correctly. How can I debug this? A: file_get_contents() doesn't work the same as /regex/searchstring/ however, it's generally considered a better idea. function get_file($filename) { if (file_exists($filename)) { $contents = file_get_contents($filename); } else { return false; } return $contents; } if (preg_match("/ .../", $contents)) { echo "True "; } else { echo "False "; } If you're trying to pull a version of the pattern from the $contents as the pattern string, then you need to pull it out of the returned $contents. The $contents variable is currently a string, you can use variable variables to grab the part of it you want to use. $contents =

file_get_contents($filename); $pattern = preg_quote($pattern, "/"); $contents = preg_match($pattern, $contents, $matches);
if ($contents) { echo "True "; } else { echo "False "; } In short, you have to perform the matching and retrieving of the
