The present invention relates to a heat treatment method for a stacked dielectric capacitor for reducing a degree of stress produced in a dielectric film of a capacitor in a step of forming the stacked dielectric capacitor by stacking electrodes and the dielectric film on each other, and to a semiconductor integrated circuit device. In recent years, the density of elements, such as transistors, is increasing and/or the number of elements is increasing. As a result, the area occupied by elements per chip, i.e. the area of the chip, is decreasing. As the area of the chip decreases, the area of a region which can be occupied by wiring is decreasing. Under such a situation, in order to increase the wiring density, low dielectric constant materials, i.e. low dielectric constant films, are often used as a material of a dielectric film. FIG. 9 is a cross-sectional view of a stacked dielectric capacitor of the related art. In FIG. 9, a stacked dielectric capacitor 22 of the related art is formed in an interlayer dielectric film 28 provided over an internal circuit 26 in a semiconductor integrated circuit device 21. A plurality of electrodes 24 are electrically connected to internal terminals (not shown) provided on the internal circuit 26. External terminals 29 are electrically connected to the plurality of electrodes 24. The plurality of electrodes 24 and the external terminals 29 are formed on the same plane. In FIG. 9, a metal film 22a made of copper or the like is formed as an electrode, which is to be connected to the internal terminal
