What's new in Stronghold: A Hero's Fate:

: A Journey Through North Korea Way of Defector: A Journey Through North Korea is a 2010 documentary film directed by debut director-writer Joe Berlinger. Hailed as a "portrait of the last imprisoned regime," the film was released in July 2010 by Sony Pictures Classics. Based on interviews with former political prisoners conducted over the course of 30 months, it explores the life of Mansur Osman, the son of the founder of the North Korean socialist state, and traces his difficult journey from abandonment at a state orphanage to election as a member of North Korea's ruling Workers' Party, for which he was sent to a labor camp. On September 6, 2010, Way of Defector premiered at the Millennium Broadway Cinema in New York City, where it was well-received by critics, but did not attract a wide audience. Coproduced with the Center for Korean Studies at the University of Michigan, the film had its official release in the United States on July 12, 2011, in select theaters by Sony Pictures Classics. The Republic of Korea attempted to block the film in 2010, but its ban was lifted two years later. The Dutch film distributor, Filmpact, acquired rights to the film in 2011, and released the film in the Netherlands on April 27, 2013. Plot On a bus trip to Heaven, Mansur Osman, the son of the founder of North Korea, is abandoned there after an accident at his trial in 1963. His parents and brother perish at the crash, and Mansur is sent to a state orphanage, where he is placed in the bottom of a garbage pile. He is taken out of the institution to work with his father in a puppet company and to play his trumpet in a celebration for Marshal Kim Il-Sung; he becomes a child prodigy and is rejected from the university on account of his illegitimate birth. In 1985, he is recruited by a North Korean agent, and soon becomes a member of the North Korean state elite. In 2003, he is sent to a labor camp at Siberia, where he toils for a decade in a mine. Mansur is accepted as a guest of North Korea's legislature in the Workers' Party of Korea convention, and is granted permission to meet with
