After the battle against XO-Ling, the main enemy, the system is in a time-loop. The player will then be visited by an army of small AI-controlled enemies over a time span of five turns. If the player avoids these small enemies, the loop is restarted. If the player shoots a ship, these small enemies return to their 'mass' again and become more powerful in a time-loop. Get ready for all of that, and think about your plan and choices. The loss of a ship will mean a loss of life, time and progress. So take care. The common AI are other ships with a class like you. During the battle the player can change his radar and weapons setup, and can try to destroy enemy ships. After destroying an enemy spaceship, the player will have a chance to use the destroyed ship as resource for parts and gear. Every destroyed enemy ship can be repaired. It shows visible indicators on the map if the ship can be repaired. The player can navigate the ship on purpose to get parts, rotate the ship and take a look at the system on the screen. You can inspect the stats on the different parts of the ship and read messages from the crew. The radar can be configured to show more information about the map, distance and an overview of the region. Each ship has a stock of parts that can be used to build up a new ship. The player can also take as much as he wants from defeated enemy ships. Parts can be taken and added to the inventory by pressing L + X at the panel of the ship. Parts can be given to the crew by selecting them and pressing the ESC key. There are different types of modules. The Radar module tracks enemies and can help you to destroy ships by offering you the possibility to shoot them down in an angle. The Weapons module can shoot several types of weapons. The Heat Sink module cools down the Weapons, Radar and Power Core module and can also be used to fire at enemies in a wider area. The Hull Shield module covers the ship, but also defines a force-field that limits the damage that the ship can take when hit by the enemy. The Power Core module is a vital part of the ship that maintains the ship's battery and energy. It can be recharged by other modules and keeps the ship alive. The module can be upgraded with more modules or can be brought down to three levels and then destroyed. Each satellite has its own abilities.

TL: Cannongerbil Editing: The Cast QC: Spitz Writer: Tashiro Mato Artist: Ayase Editor: IchiA 65-year-old male ex-smoker presented with a gradually progressive red irregular painful swelling on the dorsum of his tongue. He gave a history of the swelling since 6 months and was restricted in taking food. He had a positive family history of cases of keratotic or warty lesions of the oral mucosa. A 5 cm × 7 cm oval indurated firm mass was present on the dorsum of the tongue. This lesion was nontender, local edematous and bloodless ([Fig. 1]{#F1}{ref-type="fig"}). All the laboratory tests like complete blood count, and blood sugar tests were within normal limit. Surgical excision biopsy was performed and the histopathology revealed proliferation of atypical squamous epithelial cells arranged in strands, cords, and islands with abundant intercellular edema and edematous stroma suggestive of amelanotic malignant melanoma ([Fig. 2]{#F2}{ref-type="fig"}). Metastasis was not seen in our case. The patient was prepared for surgical excision, but he rejected any surgery and was referred to KFMC (King Fahad Medical City Riyadh, Saudi Arabia) for further management. !Preoperative picture showing a 5 cm × 7 cm sessile and red oval lesion on the dorsum of the tongue{#F1} !Photomicrograph showing proliferation of atypical squamous epithelial cells arranged in strands, cords, and islands with abundant intercellular edema and edematous stroma; hematoxylin and eosin (H&E) ×400{#F2} Although malignant melanoma of the oral cavity is extremely rare, the incidence of malignant melanomas of the oral cavity has increased in the last 20 years, with greater incidence of melanotic melanoma and atypical acral malignant melanoma. Melanotic melanoma commonly arises from sun-exposed structures, like the palms of the hands, the foot soles and the lower extremities. The tongue is a rare site for melanotic melan
