doesn't the De Bruijn representation work on the list constructor in Coq? I was trying to prove the transitive closure of a relation using Coq's De Bruijn representation. The syntax I came up with is Inductive t : Type := |
t_nil : t | t_rec : forall {m n l:nat} (f

$g:m \rightarrow n$), $t \ m \rightarrow t \ n \rightarrow t \ (f :: l)$. A simple enough example, but Coq tells me it doesn't have a suitable inductive type. I tried inlining the type definition so that the De Bruijn representation appears to work as expected. Inductive t : Type := | $t_nil : t$ | $t_rec : \text{forall } \{m \ n \ l : \text{nat}\} \ (f \ g : m \rightarrow n), t \ m \rightarrow t \ n \rightarrow t \ (f :: l)$. But in that case, it says Not a proof. How come this representation doesn't work? A: A type is represented in Coq using a combination of the types with no constructors: $\{A\}$ and $\{A$
