In the package, when you see a parent holding a child, you will laugh. When you see a child holding a cookie, you will also laugh. When you see an adult eating a cookie, you might laugh as well. You just never know what they're eating. My Mom has always had a small relationship to the cookie aisle. However, I remember being with her when she went to the convenience store to buy cookies for her co-workers. I was probably around seven years old. There were rows and rows of cookie shelves and next to them were boxes of cookies (I know this because I couldn't help but point it out to her, "Mom, there are so many cookies! There are too many cookies!"), cookies too filled with butter, cookies with extra butter, cookies without butter, cookies with nuts, cookies without nuts, cookies with raisins, cookies with peanuts, cookies with brown sugar, cookies with white sugar, cookies with cranberries, cookies with coconut, cookies with chocolate chips, cookies with bits of chocolate, cookies with bits of candy, cookies with bits of peanuts, cookies with bits of almonds, cookies with bits of pretzels, cookies with bits of cheese, cookies with bits of carrots, cookies with bits of cake, cookies with bits of apples, cookies with bits of strawberries, cookies with bits of ketchup, cookies with bits of mustard, cookies with bits of jelly, cookies with bits of sauerkraut, cookies with bits of hot pepper, cookies with bits of chocolate topping, cookies with bits of pecan topping, cookies with bits of pineapple topping, cookies with bits of peanut topping.
