In recent years, both fluorescence-activated cell sorting (FACS) and fluorescence in situ hybridization (FISH) techniques have been used widely in the identification of genetic abnormalities in hematopoietic malignancies. Over the last 10 years, the combination of these two techniques has resulted in increasing knowledge of the genetic abnormalities causing leukemias and lymphomas. A high-throughput system of FACS and/or FISH analysis, with up to 40 to 50 markers, can be used to predict the outcome and to guide the treatment of these disorders. This review discusses various applications of the FACS and/or FISH systems for the clinical diagnosis of hematopoietic malignancies, and proposes a strategy of a multi-step approach in the clinical evaluation of patients with hematopoietic malignancies, based on the use of both tests. Story highlights R&B singer Craig David's parents are Nigerian immigrants David is still managing to meet fans after almost 25 years in the music industry David's latest CD "Royalty" is a mix of R&B, hip-hop and pop Craig David still manages to make a difference. "I believe you have to give something back to the world for what you have received," he said in an interview Thursday with CNN's Fareed Zakaria. David, who has had a succession of hits over the last decade -- including 2007's "Fill Me In" -- is the most successful of Africa's new generation of stars. He comes from humble roots -- his parents are Nigerian immigrants -- and the music was a natural expression of his personality. "I grew up as

"He got up against an incredible Gallic defender, one of the best defenders in the world. There was always talk of coming into this match with a target on his back but he did not have to look for it, he was under a great deal of pressure. "Reedies was in my view was smashed into the ground, it was no good for him, he had nowhere to hide, there was no space in which to operate, there was nobody backing him up." staff and he labelled the tackle as "one of the dirtiest that I have seen" and said it was a "deliberate, vicious, foul". Asked if he had seen a replay of the incident, the Channel 9 commentator said he had not and if he had it "would have been sanctioned." "I haven't seen it, thank God," Ross said. "I don't know exactly what the intent was, it was certainly a hard-hit and a man down. "If you hit a man, it is easy to forget about the result." France had earlier named a 34-
