Transactivation of the human IL-6 receptor gene by vitamin A. Vitamin A deficiency has been associated with an increased incidence of many types of cancers. We have previously reported that retinoic acid (RA) inhibits the growth of MCF-7 breast cancer cells in culture. In this report, we demonstrate that RA causes transcriptional activation of the growth inhibitory retinoid orphan receptor (RXR) and the human IL-6 receptor alpha chain (IL-6R) gene in MCF-7 cells. The RXR and IL-6R promoters were studied in their natural chromatin environment with respect to RA responsiveness by electrophoretic gel mobility shift assay and promoter function was quantified with a chloramphenicol acetyl transferase (CAT) reporter gene. Transcriptional activation was dependent upon the presence of functional RA receptors (RARs), as shown by the ability of RAR agonists to stimulate IL-6R-CAT transcription. Pre-treatment of cells with an RAR antagonist blocked the ability of RA to stimulate IL-6R-CAT transcription. A deficiency in vitamin A or RAR levels in MCF-7 cells increased the basal activity of the RXR and IL-6R promoters, suggesting that the RA-RXR-IL-6R pathway is important in the control of receptor gene expression in normal and malignant cells. These results imply an important role for retinoid receptors and their ligands in the growth control of cells, possibly by interaction with a "chaperone" protein. COULD THIS BE GENDER, CREED OR RACE?
