Search &.A New Medical Practice model. A transplantation-centered medical practice. The desire to establish a clinical practice that would conform to the principles of the transplantation community motivated a change in the organization of clinical practice at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center. Clinicians with interest in the field of organ transplantation, transfusion, and clinical pharmacology met to discuss ways to incorporate organ transplantation into medical practice. After extensive discussion, a new model of medical practice was conceptualized. This model is based on the following principles: (1) a continuing medical education program that emphasizes knowledge of organ transplantation, (2) a comprehensive care approach that emphasizes the concept of supportive care, (3) the clinical setting as the major educational vehicle, and (4) administrative support for the practice. Supportive care encompasses a broad range of physical, emotional, and social health care needs that can be rendered within a medical practice. Care within supportive therapy was linked conceptually to the model that the authors wished to establish.
