works.bepress.com President Obama has committed the U.S. to doubling the rate of oceanic conservation and protection by 2020. There is good news in this as many creatures need the oceans to live, and the oceans need the creatures to survive. For example, fish, shrimp and other creatures create the oxygen we need to breathe, and they also provide a huge source of nutrition for us, and that is great. Sadly, many creatures in the oceans are not doing so well. The climate is changing at an unprecedented rate, and as a result many of the creatures that need the oceans are not doing so well. As a result, both the health and the productivity of the oceans are declining.
A recent scientific study has found that the total amount of ocean has gone down by about two percent since 1950, and that equates to over two hundred million acres of ocean disappearing every year. This means, the oceans are declining at a faster rate than they have in hundreds and hundreds of years. There are many sources of pollution in the oceans, and the biggest and most obvious source is the human population. Over half of the rivers that run into the oceans end up in the oceans for our drinking and bathing. Without us, most of the creatures would not be able to survive. So as the human population continues to grow, we need to be mindful of our impact on the health and the well being of the oceans. Another way in which humans impact the oceans is by drilling deep into the ocean floor and dredging up the treasure that is housed there. On a more positive note, humans are searching for ways to conserve the oceans. For example, marine scientists are looking into ways to clean and turn the oceans into a sustainable way of life for us. If we do not find a way to balance the health of the oceans with

Except for the name "Embryology" which I prefer to avoid because it's not a "main" word and I'm not fond of list names, I cannot get the name of the topic to appear on EPP lists."But then the magic trick failed. After four days, the party could not get the drone to return to the same spot in the yard. When you get a drone back, it can either fly through a house without disrupting things, or be viewed with a closed-circuit TV camera. On the ITAR-TASS video you can see the drone approach the yard. It's hovering next to the birdbath. Then the drone moves to the right, and the birdbath moves with it. At the same time, the doors and windows of the house open and close."It isn't a secret that I used to be a programmer and a web developer for many years. In fact, I was a solo developer and I created a lot of open-source projects. But when I was in my mid-twenties, I decided to stop the corporate game and I started my own company. I also wanted to try learning a new language and well, Clojure just nailed it. What is Clojure? Clojure is a functional programming language that runs on the JVM and works in the Clojure REPL. It is an object-oriented language with a functional look and feel. Quick start It is very easy to start programming Clojure. You need to download the latest stable version of Clojure (at the time of this writing it is 1.6.0) and install it. `$ wget -O - | java -jar - $ lein new clojure-dev my-project` You need to `cd` to my-project and start coding! If you like Clojure, you should read this book. Reading Material While I am not a bookworm, I tried to read some materials and they are actually better than the books. Clojure Programming In Depth Robert Virding is an old school Clojure user. He has been developing Clojure for 20 years. He has lots of great insights, he is honest, generous and he is awesome. John (of Clojurists Anonymous) gave a presentation at Clojure/West 2013 that
