"The Feel of the Game" allows teams to decide on the appropriate placement of 11 players by using algorithms to optimize the player density, angle, speed, and placement, during both attack and defence. FIFA 22 also introduces dynamic light conditions, where the ball flickers and glows depending on whether the sun is rising, setting, or on a cloudy day. "It is an exciting time to be working on FIFA," said David Rutter, Senior Designer at EA SPORTS. "We have learned so much about the sport during this year's launch, and we have incorporated this into the gameplay experience that is at the core of FIFA 22." The player response to FIFA will use the deep-learning AI Engine, which is connected to more than 300K gameplay elements, including player reactions, passing, shooting, saves, and player behaviour and positioning. There will be over 70 different reactions on-screen for the individual players, to ensure a realistic, human-like reaction for the players as well as a fluid, fast-paced match. The introduction of a Real-World Transfer Market was one of the biggest changes in FIFA. Players now have the ability to buy, sell, and manage their existing players in a Career Mode by using a variety of new tools, which includes the transfer market, contract rollover, and contract renewal. In addition, transfer fees have been adjusted to make them more competitive with the current market. FIFA 22 also features a brand-new UEFA Champions League mode which lets users choose their path through the European leagues and the Champions League, including the group stage, knockout stage and even the final itself. FIFA 22 is planned for release on PC, PlayStation 4, and Xbox One on July 24.
